Liverpool Health Partners Researcher Development Programme

Are you a health or social care professional, or involved in research delivery? Do you have the ambition to become a future research leader?

Applications are now open for the Liverpool Health Partners Researcher Development Programme. Delivered by Liverpool Health Partners in partnership with NHS Research & Development North West, this programme is designed to support the next generation of research leaders across health and care.

The programme is open to a wide range of professionals, including nurses, midwives, allied health professionals, pharmacists, psychologists, clinical scientists, social workers, mental health practitioners and those supporting research delivery. It also includes academic partners from Liverpool John Moores University, the University of Liverpool and the Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine.

This is a valuable opportunity to develop research skills, build networks and take the next step in your career.
