WUTH to share deconditioning improvement work at global summit

Colleagues are invited to take part in a free international summit focused on preventing deconditioning and improving outcomes for patients across health and care settings.

The 7th Global Summit: #EndPJparalysis will take place online on 8th and 9th July 2026 and will bring together healthcare professionals from across the world to share best practice, research, innovation and lived experiences linked to preventing deconditioning.

Now in its eighth year, the summit explores how reducing deconditioning can improve patient outcomes across hospitals, communities and home settings. Sessions throughout the event will cover a wide range of topics including leadership, rehabilitation, patient experience and practical approaches to keeping people active and independent during care.

WUTH is proud to be represented at this year's event.

On Wednesday 8th July at 9.30am, Hannah Hunter and Helen Kennedy will present a session on deconditioning prevention, showcasing work taking place across the Trust to support patients to maintain independence, mobility and wellbeing throughout their care journey.

The summit offers colleagues an opportunity to hear from experts across health and care, learn about new approaches and celebrate the work happening locally and internationally to reduce avoidable deconditioning.

The event is free to attend and colleagues can register online to access any of the sessions taking place across the two-day programme.
